

CHAPTER XV

I s r a e l

The Jews were in intelligence and culture the lowest known branch of the ^{Phoenicians} ~~Phoenician~~ race, they are of the same stock as the Sidonians, Tyrians and Carthaginians, but did not like those people settle on the sea-coast, but trecked into the interior of Western Asia, and ^{became} ~~were~~ wandering ~~about~~, shepherds and herdsmen, probably knowing very little about cultivating the soil, and in the early part of their existence, having no settled country of their own, but wandered through a wasted wilderness, gaining a precarious living wherever they possibly could; the whole history of the Jews is contained in the Old Testament, which is the only history we have of them, as contemporaneous history, hardly has a word about them, and we can only know and judge them by what they themselves claim to be their authentic history.

It is claimed that the Old Testament is the noblest, finest, and best book ever written in this world, while on the contrary it is without doubt the worst book ever written by man; From first to last it is a mass of incredible falsehood, infantile nonsense, and no book ever penned contains so much misinformation, unbelievable statements, illlogical, unreasonable ^{CLAIMS} ~~facts~~, and so much down-right filth, and pure viciousness as does the Old Testament; compared to Grimm's Fairy Tales, the adventures of the Baron Munchausen, the Decameron of Bocacio, and the writings of Rabalais, it ranks very low as history, morality, or literature; it has none of the charm ^{of} ~~and~~ Grimm's Fairy Tales, but is more unbelievable; it lacks the rollicking sense of good humor found in Munchausen, but is far more ^{incredible} ~~interesting~~, it lacks the naive entertainment of Bocacio, but is far more indecent and vulgar than the Decameron, and lacks the wit, humor and humanity of Rabalais, but surpasses him in vileness and filth; of all books published the Old Testament contains more disgusting vileness, ^{un}undulated filth, and unmitigated falsehood than any other book ever put together by men.

It is mass of lies, murders, adultery, fornication, incest heedless and needless bloody butcheries of innocent, women and children, and should it be written up to day by newspaper men in the usual words and slang of the daily press, it would be so vile and filthy that ^{it} could not be sent through the mails, and the censors of all civilized countries, would be compelled to suppress it.

It is said that the first five Chapters of the Bible were written by Moses, but this is here and now flatly denied; Moses did not write the first five Chapters of the Bible, for the following reasons; the statements in Genesis of the Creation are supposed to have occurred three thousand years before Moses was born, so he had no way of finding out any of the facts, and at the time of Moses, the Jews had no written language, consequently no record of past events of any kind could come within range of his knowledge; the Bible gives a full description of Moses's death, where he died, describes the location of his place of burial, and describes his funeral; how a dead man could write for posterity a full description of his own death, and burial, stretches the imagination until it cracks.

Besides Moses himself was an Egyptian, and as the Hebrews had no written language of their own at that time, Moses would of necessity have written Genesis in Egyptian Hieroglyphics, and we all know the Bible was written in Hebrew; there is not one word, sentence, idea, or form of language that permits us to believe that Moses ^{wrote} ~~wrote~~ one single sentence of the Bible, neither does one single fact in any part of it verify the claim that Moses was the author; on the contrary, all of the facts, historical, language, knowledge of past events, and lack of historical data, and even to the means of having his work written, published and distributed point to the plain fact that not a single part of the first five books of the Bible were written or compiled by Moses.

It is doubtful if Moses ever really existed; he may be as mythical as a good many other figures in religious history are, who only existed in the fervent imagination of their creator, and no history of that period contains any reference whatever to a character called Moses.

Moses may have been a Hebrew Hero created by the Hebrew Priests as was Hercules of the Greeks, William Tell of the Swiss, and Roland of France; all nations seem to have created a mythical hero, either to use in song or story, or to be the creator of some religious movement, and Moses may have been the Hebrew idea of Ulyses of the Greeks, or Zoroaster of the Persians; We will then flatly deny that a man called Moses wrote the first five Chapters of the Bible, and we will further assert that there is not the slightest proof that he ever lived.

We will now proceed with a review of the Bible ^{itself} ~~more~~, which to some extent must be repetitious, and see if we can make any sense out of it; the Bible begins with the First Chapter of Genesis and the first line is: "In the Beginning God" Now God can only mean here Jehovah, it could not mean Osiris, Zeus, Jupiter, Thor, Allah, Christ, or the Holy Ghost, so it must mean Jehovah, the tribal God of the Jews, made and created by the Jews, but as Jehovah was created a long time after the "beginning" by the Jews themselves, we are started with the idea of a God at the beginning of the creation who was not himself created by his creator, until about three thousand years after the creating events were supposed to have taken place.

The man who wrote that about three thousand years after the Biblical date of the creation, simply made the Hebrew God, Jehovah, the grand creator of the Universe; very flattering indeed to Jehovah, and extremely flattering to the Jews themselves, Jehovah's creators; It goes on with "Created heaven and earth" that is a plain statement of a fact, but where is heaven, in what direction is it, if a man on one side of the earth when speaking of heaven points upward, and another man on the other side at the same time points upward, then we have heaven located on both sides of the universe at one and the same time; is it located in the North? South? East or West? Who can answer, and who can place this locality; is it within the sun, the nearest fixed Star Alpha, one of the stars of the first magnitude, like Antares, in the Spiral Nebula Andromeda, or in one of the Island Universes one hundred and fifty million light years in distance.

If the Astronomers point their 100 inch telescope to all sections of the Universe, can they pick out one particular place in the whole universe that could be the actual location of heaven? Any cleric can tell us all about the location of heaven, how it is built, and what it contains, but the most learned astronomer in the world cannot tell us a single thing about it, it may be claimed that theology is a more learned profession than is astronomy, but surely one is permitted to doubt that; we now have a heaven created by, ~~by~~ we know not whom, in a direction we know nothing about, nor how it is formed, nor built, what it contains, its dimension or size, in fact no one on earth, knows the least thing about it, even including the clerics.

The next part is, "And the Earth" so we have Jehovah creating the earth instantly, and without loss of time, about six thousand years ago; is that a good true explanation of the creation of this world, or is the late modern explanation the theory of gravitational Instability inspired by mathematical astronomers, the better one; most students much prefer the modern scientific theory, and in the light of what we know that creation of Genesis can be called a story or a fable; the next reads "And the Earth was without form and void" this can only mean, the earth did not exist, and that space itself did not exist; it continues "And Darkness was upon the face of the deep". We can ~~not~~ understand there was total darkness, but where was the face of the deep? And what deep is meant here, does it mean the depth of the ocean? It could not possibly mean that, for the ocean itself did not exist, then what in the name of common sense does it mean? We continue, "And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters". The spirit of Jehovah? Does that mean that Jehovah has a body and soul as a man, and that his spirit is a distinct part of him? That is the only sense one can make out of the statement, providing there is any sense in it at all, and next "And God said let there be Light? That must mean that Jehovah instantly created Light, and as we know the only light we have is the light of the sun, it must surely mean that Jehovah at that instant created the sun, and this is verified by what follows: "And there was Light". Looking over all of that, one cannot make heads or tails out of any single part of it, from first to last, it is perfectly meaningless, it is impossible to make sense out of a single statement of any part of it; the Bible goes on to say that on the first day, Jehovah created light, which is the sun and on the second day, created heaven and earth; now if that is a fact, Jehovah only created heaven when he created the earth, but if that is a fact, where was the home of Jehovah and the angels, prior to the creation of heaven and earth six thousand years ago; Jehovah and his angels must have had some place of habitation before this world was made, yet the statement that he created heaven and the earth at the same time, is a flat contradiction; either heaven existed before the earth creation, or the Bible statement of the creation of heaven and earth on the second day, is plainly false.

Jehovah must have existed throughout all of eternity before the creation, and if everything was a void, must we believe that Jehovah existed in a void for billions of ages? But if he did not exist in a void, for that long time, he must have existed in heaven, for we cannot imagine any other place of residence for Jehovah, yet ^{he} if existed there, his only home before he created the earth, why was it necessary for him to create heaven the same time as the earth, when it was already in existence; we are forced to believe that if Jehovah and the angels existed for all time, they must have had their own home, and that the statement in Genesis, that Jehovah made heaven the second day of creation is absolutely ridiculous.

The rest of the story of the creation is on a parallel with the above in lacking sense or logic; the story of the creation of man, is stupid and not worthy the effort of a school boy, but the story of the garden of Eden, is one of the nicest fairy tales ever written, it is almost as good as some of the tales in the "Arabian Nights" yet far more incredible.

We are faced with the story of Jehovah creating Adam and Eve to his own likeness, without sin, but why did he not keep them that way, he could have made them like the angels impervious to sin, then why did he not do that in the very first making of man, he could just as easily have made humans who could not possibly sin, had he done so, all human trouble, and his own, would have been avoided; yet he deliberately made man who could sin, and then deliberately created sin and placed it in man's way; why create sin and why tempt man, neither was necessary and we are forced to the conclusion that Jehovah made a grievous mistake, which caused his only son to be butchered four thousand years later to make a Roman holiday.

Some of that Garden of Eden story is good comedy, the snake slipping into the garden, standing on the point of his tale, talking to Eve like a modern theologian, or a book agent, and finally inducing her to eat the apple, probably convincing Eve it was good for her complexion. no more incredible story than this was ever written by any of the world's masters of ironic or sarcastic comedy, this is the master fiction tale of all times.

Let us observe Jehovah slyly watching Eve to see if she would be silly enough to fall for the snake's blandishments, and when Eve ate the apple, and induced Adam to do likewise, how pleased Jehovah must have been at the silly humans falling into his trap; for look at it as you will it was nothing but a mean ^{shabby} ~~silly~~ trick played by Jehovah upon two foolish people who did not have sense enough to judge between right and wrong; besides Jehovah being omnipotent, would know in advance that she would eat the apple, and with this advance knowledge, he deliberately put temptation in her way, knowing she would fall, and in her fall, damning all posterity, that ^{was} ~~was~~ to put it plainly a piece of plain trickery by Jehovah.

On account of Jehovah's deceit, Adam and Eve fell, and Jehovah the direct, deliberate cause of the fall, unceremoniously kicks them out of the Garden and commands them to go to work and earn their living; Jehovah made two grivious mistakes, he either should have made Adam and Eve impervious to sin, or he should not have created them at all; Adam and Eve now thrown out upon a cold world, proceeded to raise a family and two sons were born to them, Cain and Able, and one day in a fit of temper, Cain slays Able with a club, and becomes a fugitive; then a strange statement is made, and Cain went to the land of Nod and ~~took unto~~ took unto himself a wife.

If Adam and Eve were the first couple in the world, where did Cain's wife ^{from} come, there must have been people living in Nod, and marriage must have been a regular part of their lives, and there seemed nothing odd about a strange wanderer taking one of their girls to wed, but where did these people of Nod, come from, and who created them? besides it must have been a settled community for it had a name, and its inhabitants must have had some origin, or were they created by their own tribal God who was as good a creator as Jehovah; or perhaps there is another explanation, the inhabitants of Nod, may have been apes, and Cain may have married a young lady ape, which may account for some of the queer antics of his decendants, or, the story may have forestalled Darwin in his theory of the decendant ^{of} man, and be a correction of that theory, that man did not descend from an ape-like creature, but that man inter-married with an ape, and created the magnificent animal we call man, and in this mixed marriage, man may have lost his hair, pointed ears and tail; that is a nice entertaining bed time story, but as a matter of fact, it would make a very poor showing in a court of law where some sensible facts are necessary for a decision.

The next story we find is the story of Noah and the Ark. The forerunner of all the sea-tales we have had since, and none of them ever written can be compared to this first original effort, and all sea stories sink into insignificance besides this beautiful tale: Jehovah informs Noah on the sly that he is going to drown the whole population of the earth, except Noah and his family; mean vindictive wholesale murder, of men, women and children, without any apprent reason; this is the first of the wholesale murders committed or ordered by Jehovah that are told of in the Bible; it is to be noted that this is not a small job of murder, but a grand killing on a grand scale that must have been a source of real joy to Jehovah and his angels, and we can imagine the great pleasure in heaven when Jehovah finally announces he will drown all mankind, except one family; the world conquerors since have been children in comparison to Jehovah as^a/wholesale murderers.

Noah now undertakes to build a large ark or boat to hold all of his family, and a pair of all living creatures to see that none of them become extinct, and the Ark must not only be large enough to contain all of the people, and living creatures, but enough food must be taken aboard to provide sustenance for all, let us imagine how immense in size this Ark must have been.

There were no saw mills in those days, no expert woodsmen, with good tools to fell the standing timber, which must be made into lumber by hand, no docks, or ship-yards to build the Ark, or to launch it when completed; so how long did it take Noah to cut down the trees, turn them into lumber, build his dock, & finish the ark, launch it ready for sailing or drifting without mills, docks, saws, or tools, Noah must have been as old as Methuselah when the work was finished.

He now proceeds to gather together a pair of all living creatures to take aboard; so he must have discovered America at this time, for in no other way could he obtain a pair of grizzly bears, Rocky Mountain Goats, Canadian Lynx, and all North and South American wild life; how long did it take Noah to make the hunting expedition to America, and how did he manage to transport all of these creatures from America to Asia, and how did he keep them alive and feed them; that was a problem so vast that it would stagger the United States Government itself, if it had to undertake this gigantic enterprise, and it is to be doubted if that Government could accomplish the undertaking if they started for instance with the elephant, and wound up with the ants, the difficulties would beggar description.

Finally the Ark was finished, loaded, and then the rain came pouring down for forty days and nights, and the earth and all creatures were drowned, nothing remained except Noah, his family and the creatures in the ark; but where did all of this rain come from? We know the sun draws up the moisture from the earth, and it returns to the earth as rain, it does not seem possible that Jehovah created oceans of new water in the heaven for this particular purpose, and if he did, what became of the surplus water after the forty days, did Jehovah destroy this surplus water, or did he withdraw it from earth, and send it to heaven for angels' consumption; that part of the story concerning hydraulics should appeal to Hydraulic engineers, it would be a good study for them in their profession.

Well the rain finally ceased, the sun came out and the ark rested on solid land, so Noah, his family and the creatures left the ark, and then began a grand scramble of the creatures to return to their natural habitation, some hurrying to Asia, Africa, America, Australia and the Islands, and in that thousands of miles of journeying, what did they live on? There was no sustenance, everything had been destroyed, so what miracle was performed to feed these creatures in their long trip ^{around} the earth, and what transported some of the slow land creatures across the ocean, these problems baffle description, and an attempted solution causes the brain to reel in despair.

We find Noah and his family now safely on land, and they proceed to establish a home, vines and fruits are planted, and when the grapes are ripened, Noah makes himself some wine, and proceeds to get gloriously drunk; this is the first real human believable thing we find in the Bible so far; we cannot blame Noah for becoming drunk and having a good time after his tremendous labors, it was very human and shows that Noah himself was a good likable fellow in spite of the very astounding events associated with his name.

The next event we notice is the building of the Tower of Babel; this was to be a building tall enough to reach the skies which would enable the people of the earth to ascend into heaven should another flood come on earth to destroy them; how they were to build a sky-scraper without the proper machinery and tools, we know not, we know that they only had sunburnt brick with which to finish this vast structure, ~~but~~ in spite of the fact that they could not possibly succeed in this undertaking, it made Jehovah very angry indeed, and he confused their tongues so they could not converse with one ~~and~~ ^{an} other, and that was the way different languages were started amongst all people.

This would be a very good ending to a very nice story if it was not for the fact that almost all of the world's well-known languages were started and built up during the past two thousand years, in fact most of the best known and used modern tongues are of very recent date including English, French, German and most of ^{the} European and American languages, it is very hard to imagine a workman at the Tower of Babel speaking modern French, ~~or~~ American slang.

The next character of interest we find is Abraham who does not appear to have been a Jew; he was probably a Babylonian, but the Bible places him as one of the big men in Jewish history; the main thing about this man is that he seemed perfectly willing to slaughter his own son in order to make a human sacrifice to Jehovah; for once in Bible history, Jehovah does not want to see some one murdered, and that is strange because as a rule, murder and destruction seem to be the very ^{breath} ~~last~~ of his nostrils, but in this instance he stops proceedings very casually; as Abraham is about to murder his son, Jehovah nonchalantly walks upon the scene and off-handedly tells Abraham the murder is really unnecessary, and that any other sacrifice will do, and they find a ram conveniently entangled in some bushes, which Abraham catches and offers up as a sacrifice in place of his son; we are to believe that Jehovah did this in order to start a new family of prominent Jews, but to us for cold blooded heartlessness, this tale passes understanding.

So we find Jehovah ordered Abraham to slay his son and then sent an angel to Abraham to stop the murder, and the reason is plain, Jehovah wanted to save the son Isaac for a particular purpose, and that purpose was to marry him to Rebecca, and ^{thereby} ~~they~~ bring into the world ^{their} ~~their~~ son Jacob, the greatest character of the Jews, and the first, and foremost cunning unprincipled cheating scoundrel in all Bible history, a perfect pattern of all ancient and modern Jews.

Jacob's first piece of villainy recorded, was to defraud his brother Esau out of his birthright, as the eldest son, at the very start of his career, practicing fraud upon his own brother; it is conceivable that the Jews are the only people who could make a model hero a perfect pattern to imitate out of this lying, cheating, graceless scamp; Jacob's next piece of sublime trickery is to deceive his blind old father, and by cunning induced Isaac to give him his blessing, which Isaac had intended to bestow upon Esau; he ^{subtly} ~~subtly~~ tricked his own brother and heartlessly his blind father; can we imagine what a good man would think of the depraved conduct of such an unnatural son and brother, the average man would have kicked such a sneaking cold blooded cheat into the street.

Jacob now appears as ^a marrying man, but as everything this ^{man} does is crooked and contemptible, we find his marrying on that same low level of morality; he decides to commit bigamy, which he proceeds to do by marrying two sisters, Leah and Rachel, two of the low common drabs of Biblical history; He has children by both of them, and both of them urge him to commit adultery with their servants, which he joyfully proceeds to do, and cheerfully fathers a batch of illegitimate children to mingle with his somewhat unlawful offspring; Jacob does not appear to have had any more sense of morality than a goat, all women were meat to feed his lust, and no profane character in history is more disgusting than this lustful brute.

The son of Jacob and Rachel was named Joseph, another typical Jewish hero, who will be noted for being a good example of other Jewish characteristics; this was displayed after Joseph was sold by his brothers as a slave to serve in Egypt, where he became a servant to Potiphar; and we now read one of the most brazen falsehoods in the Bible; the story goes on to tell that Potiphar's wife falls in love with Joseph and tries hard to get him to commit adultery with her, but he virtuously repulses her; now can any one who knows Jewish characteristics believe that incredible tale? that a Jew refused sexual intercourse with a beautiful woman when freely offered to him without cost? Flatly that story is beyond belief.

Joseph now ~~insinuatingly~~ and craftily edges himself into the good graces of the Pharaoh and ~~became~~ Prime Minister of Egypt, the first of the many Jews who have slyly slipped into high places in government by subtle knavery and audacious trickery; it is to be noticed that all of Abraham's descendants are successful, and by means of all prominent Jewish characteristics, cunning deceit and fraud; these are the ancient heroes of the Jews whom they delight to honor, and whom they strive to imitate at all times and in every manner to imitate.

Moses is the next well known Bible character that we find in this good book, his birth is shrouded in mystery, and as a baby he comes on the scene, being found in a basket amongst the Bullrushes in a small stream; he is discovered by a Princess of Pharaoh's house, but the gossips intimate that the baby was far more to the Princess than an unknown waif, in fact the Princess conveniently found the child where she knew it would be; she brought the baby to the palace and the child was reared with Pharaoh's own children; very significant if we care to read between the lines, and without doubt the Princess knew all about the birth of Moses.

He was not a Jew, but was an Egyptian, was so educated and brought up and grew to manhood an Egyptian of the Pharoah's household; the Bible shows that from the very beginning of his career, he mixed in politics and poked his fingers into everything he could mess with, a good example of a pernicious busy-body; The Jews were slaves in Egypt, being common laborers on the construction of large builsings and public works, they were hardly dealt with by the overseers and there was possibly a good reason for this, as they were naturly turbulent and at all times hard to manage, and very hard to control, consequently they were anxious to get out of Egypt, anf form a colony of their own in some sequestered place.

This was Moses opportunity to gain power and leadership he could not hope for command in Egypt for it was probably knowqhe was not legitimate, and therefore had no chance for public advancement, but he could attain leaderhsip of the Jews if he would find some way to lead them out of Egypt in a body, so the negotiations for the Exodus begins.

Now a strange part of this comic story begins, the contest between Mosas and Aaron on the one hand, and the Egyptian Magicians on the other start a contest to see who can outsmart and fool the others; astonishing miracles are accomplished fbrst by one side, then by the other, trying to prove whose God is the strongest and most mighty; the miracles are so silly, so unbelievable that it is a waste of time to read them, except for amusement during a dull afternoon, but as for them being a matter of fact, it is hardly possible that a native Australian Bushman would credit them as truths; if the author of the Arabian Nights had undertaken the task of surpassing them in adsurdity, he could not possibly have gained a verdict over them, no matter how vivid his imagination ~~xxx~~ or fantastic his invention.

Moses finally won in the contest, he was a better slight of hand artist and a more cunning trickster than the magicians, so Pharoah finally gave him permission to leave Egypt and take the turbulent Jews with him, he may have thought good riddance to bad rubbish; the Jews now getting ready to leave Egypt, planned to pull-off one their pieces of grand massed thievery and trickery; Jehovah advises Moses to have the Jews borrow all of the jewelry and property of the Egyptians they possibly can before they leave, which they proceed to do, and when they departed, theVfilched and stole everything they could lay their hands on, and Jehovah advised this wholesale thievery, can you imagine with what joy the Jews carried out Jehovah's instructions? This is the only instance in religious history in which a God directs his children to plunder and steal.

So the Jews leave Egypt in a body, loaded down with all of the plunder they could carry, and even at that, the Egyptians may have considered themselves fortunate in having got rid of the social scum of the earth, even at the cost of their jewelry and household goods stolen by the rapacious mob who had probably been a perfect nuisance during their whole sojourn in Egypt.

The story now goes on to say that Pharoah sent an army after the Jews to try and prevent them from leaving, as he had changed his mind and decided to keep them in Egypt as slaves, but this is probably not the fact; if he did send an army after them, it is more likely he wanted his soldiers to capture, and return to the owners the vast amount of jewelry, and plunder the Jews had stolen; this seems the more reasonable explanation; Pharoah was very willing to get rid of the Jews, as most countries are, but wanted his ~~own~~ stolen wealth returned.

The Jews reached the Dead Sea with no boats to cross; did that bother Moses? It does not, he waves his arms, utters aloud Hocus Pocus, and lo and behold the sea divides, and becomes dry land, and the Jews march across, but when the army of Pharoah attempts to follow, the sea returns, and drowns the whole Egyptian Army; is not that a fine story to swallow? Could any tale be more absurd? Apologists have tried to explain this story in every conceivable way, yet the only sensible explanation is that it is a down right falsehood.

The mob of Jews sixhundred thousand in number, arrive in the wilderness, and there they wander for forty years, this wilderness they occupied was not large in extent, so why did they remain there for such a length of time; there was good fertile land in every direction, easy to march to, and easy to acquire, so we may ask why did a smart people like the Jews march a round in a circle for forty years.

That is the least queer part of the whole story; they had no machinery, no tools, no mills, no raw materials, no factories, so what did they do for shoes, hats, clothing, food and living necessities of every kind; It takes a vast amount of raw material to feed and clothe six hundred thousand people for forty years; where did the raw material come from; in one year the whole mob would be barefooted and naked, and sanitary conditions must have been horrible; no soap and water scarce, therefore no bathing, under those conditions, the only thing to be found in abundance in that mob would be body lice; the explanation as to how that crowd was fed, is one of the finest pieces of fiction ever invented by man; Mark Twain and Edgar Allan Poe would have had a brain storm had they attempted to surpass that dumb-founding piece of absurdity.

During all this forty years in the wilderness, the Jews were supposed to be well fed, well clothed, plentifully supplied with arms and everything they needed for warfare in spite of the fact that they were in a wilderness and had no means of obtaining or manufacturing anything, but one thing they could and did manufacture, and that was a priesthood, it is assured the smart, cunning men in the tribe would see to that, and they themselves pick out the soft jobs.

Jehovah now calls upon Moses to meet him on Mt. Sinai to have a heart-to-heart talk, just like that, face to face; Moses goes up to the Mount, and meets Jehovah, and they probably sit down and have a long talk about the state of the weather, and the conditions of the crops, and then Jehovah informs Moses he is going to present him with the Ten Commandments which he proceeds to do; These Ten Commandments were chiseled on stone, granite, or marble, we are not sure which, but the point is this, did Jehovah quarry this block of granite, himself, or did he request Moses to do the quarrying, if so, how long did it take him, and what tools did he use to quarry a slab of granite large enough, smooth enough, and thin enough to use as a tablet upon which to chisel this long message; did Jehovah do the mechanical work, and did he himself furnish the chisel and mallet, or did Moses bring those tools with him when he went up the Mount.

After the presentation speech, how did Moses get this large heavy slab of granite to the foot of the Mount? was he a giant, and carried it down himself, or did he send for a good sized crowd of men with teams of oxen, and ^{haul} ~~haul~~ the things down? We can only conjecture.

The Ten Commandments themselves are as unnecessary as any piece of religious foolery ^{that} ~~ever~~ ever was invented. From the first to the last word, it is sheer nonsense, and never was needed by any decent man; no good man needs to be told what is right, or wrong, he knows: It is not necessary to tell a man he must not kill, must not commit adultery certainly not, for ~~instinctively~~ instinctively he knows those things are wrong; he does not abstain from them because he is ordered to do so by the Ten Commandments, but because his innate sense of decency impels him of his own choice to do what is the right thing; the fact that the Ten Commandments were given by Jehovah in person to Moses, does not, and will not prevent men from violating them at will, the fear of the law may compel a man to obey them, but not the Commandments themselves.

All of them could have been abolished and forgotten without the slightest loss to the world, and in their place, could be substituted the Golden Rule "Do unto others as you would wish others to do unto you." That is the grand true rule of life, and if properly lived up to, no other law is needed except one, and that one is needed very much indeed by the makers of religions and Bibles, and that law is "Thou shalt not lie". That is the one and only commandment needed with the addition of the Golden Rule to keep all men decent, and all governments just, all religions unnecessary, and all people contented and happy.

Moses now proceeds to form the laws to govern the Jews, politically morally, physically, mentally and religiously, and as usual the priesthood get the best of the deal, and are very well taken care of, and the Jewish Priests from then on are the same greedy, meddlesome, rapacious, cunning mob of loafers they have been in all countries and in all religions, from the beginning of racial government until today.

Some of the sanitary laws are very good indeed, those looking after the health of the people, ~~are~~ in particular, very beneficial; the law of circumcision was a very intelligent piece of work, and was formed by a smart man for a particular purpose; the Jews being a very sensual race, were prone to acquire a certain venereal disease, and the operation of circumcision was made on the body of men to somewhat protect them from catching this rather horrible malady; it has been very successful in that respect, and this law was made not for a religious purpose, but for a healthy sanitary reason; some of the other laws are fantastically absurd and foolish, especially the religious part of them which ~~was~~ ^{were} undoubtedly made for the benefit of the priesthood.

In spite of all, Moses did, he found it a very hard job to govern and control the Jews; they were too unruly and head-strong to obey any man, or any law, they continued to worship idols and other Gods as they pleased, and by so doing, incurred the wrath of Jehovah who usually threatened and cursed them roundly, and was as a rule in a blind rage, against his chosen people on account of their innate cussedness, no doubt the

Jews tried Jehevah's patience to the limit, but as ~~the~~ Jehovah, and were slyly aware of the fact that he was only a figure of their imagination, ~~that~~ they do not seem to have feared him at all, and in spite of his blustering threats, and dire promises of his punishing and his threats of vengeance, they gayly went their own sweet way, raising ~~xxx~~ cain ~~an~~ stealing and worshipping any one, or anything they choose, and in general giving a hard working God all of the trouble he could attend to; this shows plainly that since the beginning of the race, it has been impossible for any nation to control or govern the Jewish people, and least possible was it for the Jews to govern themselves, or to submit to peaceful government by their own rulers, or leaders; they have been a source of trouble to every country in which they have settled, and no country has met with more success in handling them than did Jehovah himself; so it is no wonder that he fretted, fumed and stormed, no matter what he wanted, or ordered, his chosen people to do, they did the opposite, and it is very strange, he did not wash his hands of the whole mess, and let them go there own way to perdition, as they eventually did anyhow, so he might just as well have gotten rid of them at this early period, and saved himself a great deal of worry and trouble.

Moses has now governed the Jews for forty years, and it cannot be said to have been a very successful job, but he did the best he could with the poor material he had to work with, so we will give him credit for doing the best he could under the circumstances; the time now arrives for Moses to die, for like all men he was mortal, yet it is strange he is not rushed up to heaven in a fiery chariot, or does not ascend in a ~~grand~~ display of fire works; some stupid historian is at fault there, for he missed the opportunity of inventing one of the finest, and most spectacular miracles that could be thought out, for it is unthinkable that this sublime character should be planted in the earth like any common man, and not be transplanted to heaven in a blaze of glory; well we must record that Moses finally dies, and was buried, and that seems to be the end of the matter for the Bible states that even the location of his grave is not known.

Yet here a strange event appears, for after his death Moses proceeds to write a full description of his death, and burial, where he was buried, and writes rather full particulars of the whole proceedings, even mentioning he does not know the location of his own grave; now this must be so, for it is claimed on all sides that Moses wrote the first five books of the Bible, and his death and burial are described in the last of these books; so we are faced with the fact that he wrote of his own death and burial, or that he did not write the first five books of the Bible; we leave it to all sensible men to make their own choice.

The question now is, did a man Moses ever really exist? Or did he only exist in the imagination of some Jewish literatureist, who made him the imaginative hero of the Jewish people; such a man-made character has been inserted into all religious writing, some times in the form of a man, and at other times a demigod- or part god, and it is possible that Moses is a mythical character, born out of the brain of some intelligent Priestly Scribe.

So far as history goes, there is no mention of Moses, the only thing we know of him, is what is contained in the Bible, and that is so full of contradiction, falsehood, fairy tales, senseless miracles, stupid science, and a child-like knowledge of time and history, that one cannot put the slightest reliance upon any single paragraph, in the whole weird book; it ranks far below the Avesta, and even the Al Koran, and compared to Confucius, it is absolute trash; Confucius soars far above it in morality, decency, good rules of conduct, good true ways of living, benevolence, kindness, and all things to make men wiser, better, and purer, one verse of Confucius is of more benefit to mankind than the whole Jewish Bible.

After the death of Moses, a new page of history begins in the Bible, the conquest of the Promised Land, the Land of Canaan; this country is settled and also governed by people who have occupied the land for a long time, but that does not deter the Jews, who now plan a rapacious bloody invasion of these people, that would put to shame the worst invasions of the Tartars or Turks; the succeeding campaign is ^{the worst} a nauseating mass of rapine, murder, bloody butcheries and wholesale thievery that history records; nothing is too mean or vicious for these murderous scoundrels to do, they conquer peaceful people, put ~~them~~ the men, women and children to the sword, and save the maidens to be brutally raped by the Jewish soldiery, and all of this infamy committed at the expressed command of Jehovah, their viciously brutal God.

A plain description is written of how the Jews captured women big with child, and ripped their bellies open, which must have been very pleasing in the sight of Jehovah; how he dotes on bloodshed and debauchery, which are both so very pleasing to his sight, he seems never to be satisfied unless he smells the blood of innocent women and children, or unless a large number of maidens are being raped and outraged by his chosen people; there is no record of any other invasion of savage hordes that deliberately acted with such fiendish demoniacal, insane butchery, and thieving debauchery, as did those Jews according to their own Bible, and at the expressed command of their God.

What can we think of the state of mind of modern religionists and clerics who accept and worship as God the divine creator of Heaven and earth this fiendish brute, lower, viler, and more contemptible than the lowest brute that ever lived; Of all the Gods created by men, Jehovah is without doubt the worst of the lot; compared to him, Bal Marduk of Babylon, and Bal of Carthage were gentlemen, and both of them were Gods of the Phoenicians who are blood brothers of the Jews, and in comparison, Zeus of the Greeks, and Jupiter of the Romans were saints, along side of Jehovah.

And to carry the comparison further, who is the more decent, Jehovah or Satan; from the viewpoint of religionists, Jehovah holds the palm, but from the viewpoint of decent men, Satan is by far the better more humane character than Jehovah; for at least he is frankly evil, while on the other hand Jehovah is the personification of cruelty, hypocrisy and base deceit; of the two characters, it would be far safer to trust Satan than to trust Jehovah; why this character, Jehovah is deified is beyond comprehension; the human reason is staggered when it tries hard to figure out what is God-like, calm, kind, or forgiving about this God, when as a matter of fact there is not one decent human attribute to this inhuman, unhuman, deceitful, man-hating destroyer of everything good and true.

The succeeding chapters of the Bible, are continuous, repetitions of the same old story of rapine, murder and robbery, so it is not worth repeating, suffice it to say the Jews finally conquered the people and seized their land, property and cattle, and so for the first time became prosperous, and a united nation. But this condition could not long remain, for as soon as they were well established, they began to quarrel ~~amongst~~ amongst themselves, for they never tolerated peace and happiness; forever they must be in turmoil, ever raging, fighting, with or without a reason, ever preferring contention and strife than quiet peaceful happiness; their whole history from now on is a continuous strife, either personal or tribal.

We find a story now called the Book of Ruth, a strange story indeed, for a Bible, why this story was ever written, passes understanding as there is no sense to the whole book, no real meaning can be detected, and for what purpose it was written, seems hard to fathom; it tells the story of this unknown woman named Ruth, but there is no head or tail to the story, no historical event is recorded, no change of government or tribal law, so the meaning of it remains obscure; there is only one event recorded that is worth noticing, and that is an act of Ruth herself.

It seems that Ruth wants to entangle a rich man named Boaz, so one night after he had eaten and drank heavily he laid down to sleep, and sly Ruth slipped into his tent, and crawled into bed with him, and when ~~he~~ later on he found out who it was that had been so accommodating, why the idiot married her, and of course made her prosperous; that is the whole story, but what is one's opinion of Ruth's conduct; what would the police call a woman who would turn a trick like that, and what would the Vice Societies have to say about her? If that woman is a good example of Biblical characters, one would much prefer to select our pattern ^{character} ~~character~~ from profane stories.

There now appears a real character upon the stage, a leading man whose name resounds in Jewish History, and traditions, and whom the Jews delight to honor and exalt - his name is David, and he is King of Israel.

David now proceeds to make a perfect exhibition of himself - he sees a woman, and becomes infatuated with her, sends for her and begs her to commit adultery with him, and David being King, and having favors to bestow, this drab joyfully consents, and becomes his mistress, ~~and~~ disgracing her husband's good name, and generally conducts herself ~~like~~ like a common harlot; one of David's Captains Uriah by name, was the husband of this she-cat, Bathsheba, and being afraid that Uriah would discover the adultery, and make serious trouble, he plans the deliberate murder of the injured husband and has his dastardly deed carried through to execution.

In all Bible History, there is not a more debasing disgusting cowardly crime, as that committed by David, and his common drab; sensual adultery, and the cold-blooded murder of the injured, innocent husband, could villainess stoop any lower? and this inhuman brute, is one of the National Heroes of the Jews; have they any right or reason to be proud of this lecherous, murdering royal blackguard?

We find that David can sink even lower; it seems impossible, but he really does, he marries the common harlot, and lo! and behold from that nasty adulteress marriage, is born another, and even greater national hero of the Jews. The Bastard Solomon; the only good thing we know about David is that he died, and rotted, and the world was well- rid of a common unfeeling beast.

Solomon now reigns in all of his glory, and his great glory is grabbing all of the money he can lay his hands on; he is the grand pattern of acquisitiveness for the Jews, whose ^{motto} ~~motto~~ is "get the money no matter how", and with might and main they have followed Solomon's example throughout their history.

Solomon had but two big ideas on the brain - money and women- He gathered money by the bushel, and women by the hundreds, the first grand example of the human goat, with his brains in the wrong place; wives and concubines; we understand what wives are, but what is a concubine? Is it a polite name for prostitutes? It must be, for the Dictionary does not give a better definition, so we will let it go at that, and say that Solomon filled his palace with wives and prostitutes; a nice moral character for clerics to preach about in Churches; no doubt lots of good sermons about Solomon, and his antics with his women could be preached in all churches, and they would be very edifying, and instructive to young boys and girls just entering upon the knowledge and duties of life, and do parents believe such a sermon would be moral, and highly instructive to their children?

Solomon now undertakes to build his big temple to God, but the Jews are not good architects and builders, so he called on his brother Phoenicians of Sidon to assist him, which they do, and when the temple is completed, it is considered a grand edifice indeed; the Bible describes how it was built, its dimensions, and how decorated, and it should mention that the great subjects for adoration in the Holy of Holies were the enlarged representations of the ~~male~~ male and female organs of conception; we can well believe that these were objects for Solomon's adoration, but it appears the adoration was carried on by the whole Jewish population, for Solomon was also accommodating to the public, and looked after the finances of the temple by having Booths built around the temple for public prostitutes to accommodate the citizens, and the money earned by these women, was turned over to the priests of the temple to help pay the expenses; a nice temple built by a nice man, for a nice religion for a nice people; stench, filth, greed and debauchery; building and temple praised by clerics for thousands of years, and condemned by not one single one of them; a cess-pool of filth called a Holy place, and yet only a hissing and a by-word to all decent men.

In his old age, worn out by debauchery, he gave himself to reforming mankind by good advice, the same as all old worn out sinners do, when he positively cannot sin any more physically, he advises everybody to quit sinning, the old story "When the devil was sick, the devil a monk would be, but when the devil was well, a hell of a Monk was he." A chapter of the Bible is given over to his lamentations, and regrets for his ~~x~~ lost manhood, and lost pleasures, yet his whole life doesnot give us a single lesson of morality, kindness, or brotherly love, his whole life was a mess of mean, sordid, viciousness, and this man is a great Bible character, and a national hero of the Jews; it is a pity they could not select a character who was at least a gentleman, ~~the~~

The rest of the Bible is a pile of nonsense, miracles, and petty stories of Kings, wars and unbelievable tales; one of the best is Jonah and the whale; more fun has been poked at that than any other fairy tale; let us see if we cannot look at it in a totally different light; the story states Johan was in the whale's belly three days; now how did he breathe? Why did he not suffocate? And another thing, why did not the whale's gastric juice absorb Johan, and why was he not digested in the Whale's belly? If a man today was swallowed by a large fish, he would suffocate in five minutes, and be thoroughly digested within five hours; and how did Johan cause all natural functions to cease?

Another grand tale is the one of Lot and his daughters; after they escaped, the destruction of Sodom, they moved into a cave in the hills, and Lot proceeds to get drunk, and while intoxicated his daughters copulate with him, and although he is physically helpless, he is able to pregnate them ^{does} .; ~~was~~ any physician say a man can accomplish ~~that~~ while beastly drunk? It is to be doubted, but where is the lesson in purity and morality in this wretched tale of incest, and gross immorality; this would make a nice story to tell if told in plain Wnglish to a Sunday School Class of young ladies, and gentlemen; Can that story be called either religious or ~~x~~ Holy? Some clerics may so interpret it, but the average man would think it as something to be handled by a police court, and an anti-vice society would condemn it rather severly.

Then there is the Samson Story - the story of the Giant in strength overcome by the wiles of a smart woman, you will notice Bible characters always fall hard for loose women; Samson is a very good imitation of our old friend Hercules, some Greek who knew that hero's story, evidently slipped him into the Bible so that the Jewish Bible would have a man as big and strong as the Greek hero.

But the Bible story instead of making ^{him} appear great, only leaves him ridiculous, a big over-grown fool without brains and without a particle of sense; a Sunday school teacher told the story of Samson time and again to a class of boys, and one of the boys was asked one day what was his favorite character in the Bible, he promptly replied "Simpson". Simpson exclaimed the minister, why who was he, and what did he do? Oh, was the nonchallant reply. "He is the feller who took a bone out of Jack's ass, and slew fifty thousand Philadelphians." That boy's description and his story is as good as any ever given.

After fighting amongst themselves for years, the Jews were finally conquered by the Babylonians, Jerusalem was destroyed, and the people taken captives to Babylon where the Jews at last learned to read and write, and to form their language, as they were densely ignorant up to this time; the rulers of Babylon selected some of the bright, young boys and taught them to be scribes, and clerks in the Library, where they had the opportunity of studying history, as the Babylonian Library contained history of the world, and of its beginning, the same as Genesis, it is safe to say the Jews copied that history, and later on wrote it up as their own particular story; the whole story of Genesis is a re-hash, and a copy of Babylonian lore; the Jews never even invented Genesis- they copied it.

So we find the whole story of Genesis supposed to have been written by Moses to have been ancient history in Babylon for perhaps ten thousand years, and to claim it was written and composed by Moses and the ignorant Jews, is sheer nonsense; None of them had the brains, nor the language to compose the work, no more than a Zulu could compose the Illiad.

A queer story of the captivity is called the Book of Daniel, a perfect brain storm of deceit and trickery, but it is doubtful if it was original with the Jews; it appears too much like an old well known story which the Jews adopted to their historical need; they were always searching for some vehicle to make the Jews appear great, and above all, smart, for Jews have never been given the palm for modesty; that is one virtue left entirely out of their composition.

There is hardly any more of interest in the Bible- the balance of the Book is plain trash, no morality, no humanity, no brotherly love, no desire for art, education, science or civilization- nothing but bitterness and woe and strife; finally after seventy years in Babylon, they are permitted to return home, and build the City of Jerusalem again, where we will leave them until the final destruction by Titus; the whole history now centers around what is called the New Testament, which is a continuation of the Old, but written by different people, for an entirely different purpose. This will be noticed later on, and a short summary of the Jews will finish their sorry story.

At this historic period, the best blessing that ever befell the Jewish people, happened to the nation. It became a Roman Province governed by the Pro-Consul at Antioch; at last the Jewish people had the opportunity of improving in art, literature, engineering, education, political government, and real civilization, for the Roman Empire spread civilization all over the known world, and taught all people local self-government, and showed the way to peace and happiness; the Jews are the one race who never took the slightest advantage of this opportunity for national unity, and political, and civil improvement. From first to last they were a thorn in the side of the Roman Government; always trying in every way to evade the law, not paying taxes, making life miserable for themselves, and the Roman officials, and only following the impulses of their own sordid history; they were mean, spiteful, very vindictive, hating all other people, and hating each other with a cold deadly hatred, tribe against tribe, and a terrible hatred for everything and everybody including themselves; all other races were benefitted by the rule of Rome, except the Jews, and it is certain no rule or civilization could improve them; they were firmly set against everything good, decent and educational throughout their whole history.

This condition prevailed until the reign of the Emperor Vaspasian in Rome. when the Jews broke out in open rebellion against Roman authority; some crazy prophet must have convinced them that they could safely defy imperial Rome, and at last the patience of the Emperor was exhausted and he decided to finish the dirty mess once and for all; a powerful Roman Army was organized and placed under the command of Titus, ~~Vaspasian's~~ Vaspasian's son, a skillful soldier, and a good sensible humane man; had the Jews now showed some sense or expressed some contrition, and really promised to obey Roman law in the future, Titus might at the last moment have forgiven them again, and they might have remained in Jerusalem in peace, but instead of repentance, they defied Titus, and fortified their City, and Titus then proceeded to invest it.

The story from now on is a horror, the Jews were starved out, no food could enter the City, everything possible was eaten, and yet with fanatical hatred, they still defied the Roman army; no doubt they were brave, and had iron courage and endurance, but sadly lacked military skill and sense, for no City could withstand the siege of a Roman force; as the Jews though hopelessly defeated, continued to hold out stubbornly, the patience of the Roman Commander became exhausted, and he ordered the City stormed; this could only mean one thing at that time, for if it was necessary to capture a city by assault, it meant the total destruction of the City, and its inhabitants, and that was the fate of Jerusalem and the end of Jewish government; when all preparations were made, Titus ordered the assault, the Roman trumpets sounded the advance, and the legions advanced to the attack; the Jews fought with the desperation and courage of despair, but they were no match for the trained soldiers, and military equipment of a Roman Army, and the legions finely carried the City by storm.

The scene now baffles description; the Roman soldiers penetrated the City, and maddened with rage, set fire to the houses, plundered everything, and put the inhabitants to the sword! slaughter, fire, sack and pillage; some Jews screamed to the soldiers to spare the sacred temple, but a Roman Centurian with a snarl of rage, hurled a fire-brand into the temple, and it is soon a smoking ruin, the temple and the City are destroyed, the people slaughtered, and as a unity, the race and the Jewish government came to an end.

Let us now pause and reflect a moment; we can perceive that all of this was entirely unnecessary, had the Jews accepted Roman Government, Roman civilization, and taken advantage of what Rome could teach them, they might have developed into one of the best Nations of Asia Minor, and at the breaking up of the Roman Empire, could have been in a position to become a great nation, but their terrible racial faults which they have, never tried to change, have made them outcasts in all countries, for in no country, and under no condition does the Jew change. They have the same faults, manners and habits they have had for three thousand years.

For years, men have argued that the world-wide hatred of the Jews, is religious; that is not the truth, the hatred for the Jew is purely racial, it has nothing to do with religion; for the Jew was hated by Pagan Rome, by the Moors, the Mohammedans, Spaniards, Russians, and all peoples amongst whom they have settled, and reflection will prove that this ill feeling, and contempt for the Jews, was at all times, and in all places racial and racial only ; The Jews are the only people who do not inter-marry and mingle with the people amongst whom they settle; no matter how long they live in a country, they remain Jews; ask a man born of French parents in the United States, his nationality, he instantly replies, American, but ^{ask} ~~ask~~ the same question of a Jew whose family have lived in London, six hundred years, and he will at once say "Jewish" That is their attitude in all countries, and he never forgets he is a Jew first, last and all the time, and other people take very good care to remind him of it.

The Jews could have become good Roman citizens, and became greatly benefitted by it, but they refused Roman citizenship, and preferred annihilation; therefore there is no use or reason to waste sobbing sympathy over these people, they have been in all cases the cause of their own ruin, caused by innate meanness, and it is silly indeed to say this is religious persecution, when as a matter of fact, no sensible man cares a rap for the insane Jewish religion.

Their own Biblical history proves them to have been in their own words, plundering, robbing, murderous butchers, slaughtering men, women and children, and raping girls, as heartless and mean as their blood brothers the Phoenicians, and that ~~main~~ characteristic of the Jews remains with them today, as we have had several ^{examples} ~~examples~~ of it in recent history; during the world war the English government very foolishly promised the Jews a national government in ^{Palestine} ~~Palestine~~ when the war was over, although the very same promise had been made to the Arabs, the real owners, and occupants of the land, and besides the Arabs had been active military allies of the English; now what was the result of that blind folly and duplicity of the English; after the war, the English were given the mandate for Palestine a Governor was appointed, troops were located there to keep the peace, and the Jews poured into the country, poor poverty stricken, ignorant, they piled in pell-mell regardless of the fact that it was an Arab country, populated by the Arabs.

What was the result; contention and strife from beginning to end; racial hatred added to religious hatred culminating in a horrible massacre in which 133 Jews were killed, and as usual the howl went up that the poor Jews were being persecuted on account of their dear religion, when as a matter of fact, they had no business to interfere in the Arabian government in Palestine, and if the Jews had the political and military power in Palestine at that time, they would have mercilessly slaughtered every Arab in Palestine.

Another example is Russia; after Kerenskys ' down-fall, the Jews under Trotsky, and his ilk, got forcible, political possession of Russia and what was the result? Wholesale murder, and butchery, the most astonishing and brutal the world has ever seen; no annals of history record ^{Such} ~~any~~ scenes of beastly ignorant, rapine, debauchery, and bloody in-human butchery that took place in Russia when the Jews got possession of the forces of Russian government.

Another true, and well remembered example, is before us; the communist got possession of the government of Budapest, and a Jew maniac named ~~#~~Bula Kan was raised to power; he only reigned a short time, but ~~in~~ that time, was enough to display the usual Jewish traits; Budapest was turned into a night-mare of horror, every crime was ~~committed~~ committed with impunity; thievery, robbery, murder public executions, the Jews fairly bathed in blood during their short, but horrible control of that unfortunate city; history repeating itself; the same men, the same minds, the same fanaticism, hatred, bloodthirstiness, every mean viciousness displayed today that they indulged in when they reached the Promised Land, several thousand years ago, and proceeded to slaughter the peaceful inhabitants of that land and despoiled and robbed them of everything they ^{possessed} ~~possess~~; the Jews have not changed one particular for the better during the past three thousand years.

The question often arises have the Jews been a benefit to the countries in which they have settled; and the answer to that is decidedly not. They have been a detriment to each and every country they have settled in; it is true some Jews have made a name for themselves in different countries, for they are persistent, forward, and have the ability of pushing themselves to the front; all Jews have an iron nerve, and a face of brass, but that is persistent perservering push and pull, and any man could as well succeed if he put his heart fully into the attempt as the Jew does; what we mistake for talent is merely hard driving, which so few of us are willing to undertake, we mostly hope for a streak of good luck to put us on top, but not the Jew. He hammers away hard until he succeeds; that is the reason they are the gretest money gatherers in the world; they have bent their whole minds and souls to gethering money, and we all know, they have been successful for the Jew learned long ago, that money was power, and they go to any extremity to gain wealth; when a Jew's business is losing money, he sells it to the insurance company, and when they fail in a large business, it is usually found that the principal assets, the valuable property and so on, is in the name of his sisters, cousins and aunts, and his creditors are usually found holding an empty sack.

In a country like the United States, when the Jews in a mass enter a certain line of business, that business is ruined; this is not guess work, as it has been observed time and again in this country.

Every country in the world would have been better off had they never had one Jew in it; it is a pity the world did not provide a home for the Jews two thousand years ago- a home where no gentile was permitted to enter, and which no Jew could leave, and the problem would have settled itself, for in that space of time, the Jews would have killed each other off, and one of the world's great problems would have been successfully settled.

As for the Jew's God, Jehovah, that mean old scoundrel, he is a back-number and a joke, save and except in Christian Churches, where he is received, and ~~ex~~ accepted as the only true, loving, gentle, mild creator of heaven and earth, one who truly created, and loves mankind, but who in order to assist the clerics in holding on to their soft jobs, threatens to damn us into his hand-made hell for ever if we do not do exactly as the Priests and clerics order us to do.

At a Banquet one night a Colonel of the English Army was asked his opinion of what religion was, and he replied "Oh Religion is a good thing for the gownsman to make an easy living without working.# That is about as good an explanation as we have ever heard, so we will let it rest at that.

CHAPTER XVI

In writing of the Gods, and all religions of Europe, one must write of a great many Gods, and a great many religions, for at one time or another, there have been many of each in this section of the world; we even know of peoples who left no written history, but who had good governments like the Etruscans of Italy, who had a state government before Rome was started; these strange unknown people must have had a God of some kind, but we know practically nothing of them today; we know the Greek Mythology, and how very beautiful it was, something that could appeal to the artistic in men, and which exactly suited Grecian character; we also know the Gods of Rome, good sensible Gods, like the Romans themselves, attending strictly to their own business, and not interfering with the citizen in his private or public life; it is also to be noted that the Roman Gods did not frighten the life out of women and children, they were treated by the Romans more as good friends and protectors than as something that poked into all affairs public and private.

The Roman was far too sensible to permit even a deity to interfere in his private affairs, so the Gods had a good time in their Mountain Home, and the Romans took very good care of their own affairs without any heavenly interference; Allah, Mahomets' hand-made God was top God in some parts of Europe, as in Spain under the Moors, and in Constantinople today, but Allah is now considered old fashioned, and out of date, and as a real European God has about gone by-the board; the Gods of North Europe have been dead, and forgotten for a very long time, Thor and Odin are lost in the limbo of time, and the Gods of the Irish, and Druids are a name, and a memory only.

Only one new God has been created in Europe recently, and that is "The good old German God" This God created in the fertile imagination of the ruling family of Germany, was created for one sole and particular purpose, and that was to enable the German Army to smash all of the other European Armies in battle; his sole business was to aid the Germans in battle, and all of the German soldiers wore a nice belt around their waists with a large, brass buckle on it upon which was stamped

"Gott mit uns"

In the German mind this was considered a marvel, while he wore that belt on his stomach, he was supposed to be fully under the protection of that good old German God, and may have had some hazy notion that wearing that legend on his body might possibly have a tendency to turn away bullets fired by the enemy at him, but we are not certain that any of these God-marked belts ever saved one of them from being shot through the stomach; so the Germans really had two sets of Gods, one set was the Christian Trinity, which was used on Sunday, and which was used by the Priests and Ministers for frightening, and be-fooling the people in ordinary times of peace, but in the stress, ~~and~~ excitement of war, the good old German God was lugged out, and was set to work helping the Germans whale the life out of their enemies in the field of battle.

Rather smart of the German Government - a God for all occasions, the regular European could be used in time of Peace by all people, but when trouble started, the Germans went all of the other countries one better, and brought to the front their particular powerful deity who would confound the enemy and point the way to certain victory for their own ~~forces~~ ~~xxxxx~~; strange to say in the world war, the German God for some un-explained reason, did not function except in Russia, where there was a horde of ill-armed, and ill-led soldiers, but when it came to facing British and French troops, the good old German God was busy on other fronts, and did not help his creators to smash their enemies; this must have been a sore trial to the German high command and government, for they had taken the trouble to create him, and ~~in~~ in their time of stress, he deserted them without compunction, and let them go their own way to defeat and disaster; this is the same history of all peoples and all Gods made by them, they make the Gods set them up and worship them, and create a priesthood to serve them, and then when a stronger nation attacks them for the purpose of conquest, the God is away on a vacation, and his chosen people who made him are destroyed.

One wonders what the German God was doing when the Germans invaded Belgium, perhaps he was a good imitation of Jehovah, and ordered the Germans to slay without mercy, men, women and children in that unhappy country. If he did, he was only following Jehovah's example, for what the Germans did in Belgium, was exactly what the Jews did in the Land of Canaan; since the war, we have heard no more of the good old German God. Did the Germans finally wake up, and conclude the German God was a fraud? We may be sure of one thing, and that is if the German armies had conquered Europe, the German God would today be the grand God of Europe.

Religion has played a vast part ~~in~~ in the history of Europe, many of the wars have been started entirely on account of religion, and they are the bitterest wars of all; national wars are over with, and forgotten, but religious wars even after ending leave a feeling of bitterness and hatred; the thirty years war was an example of that, a war in which countries were ^{devastated} ~~devastated~~, and whole peoples were almost wiped out, and ~~probably~~ ninety per cent of the men engaged did not know what they were fighting about.

The religious wars in France are an example of ferocious bitterness, and the difference in the religions was slight, the Catholics worshipped in Latin, and the Huguenots in French, and yet for ~~three~~ three hundred years, they drenched the country in blood; these wars were brought to an end by a fine piece of religious trickery; the Catholic party led by Queen Catherine, and Henry of Guise, induced the King to marry his sister Marguerite of Valois to Henry of Navarre, the Leader of the protestants; this marriage was to heal the breach between the two factions, and cement a lasting peace; the marriage was arranged, and the King of Navarre and his Nobles were invited to Paris for the wedding; every thing fell out as arranged; the King and his retainers arrived in Paris with their families, and a gorgeous wedding took place; there was ~~feasting~~ and rejoicing throughout the country, and peace was at last apparently restored.

While the wedding bells rang out, and all made merry, a Council was called by Catherine, and Guise, and the Catholic Clergy, and ~~it~~ it was solemnly agreed that this was a good time to get rid of the Huguenots once and for all.; so they decided on a massacre - the troops and citizens were informed of the plot, arms were distributed, instructions given ~~that~~ that at the ringing of the tocsin on the Church bells, the massacre should begin; to distinguish between friend and foe, the killers were instructed to wear on their sleeves a white cross - the emblem of their God and creed, so they could readily tell which was their enemy to be slaughtered; the killers were assembled on the night selected, the tocsin sounded, and these killers set out to religiously massacre their fellow Frenchman of whom over seven thousand were butchered; the scene in Paris was a horror, only to be depicted by a Dante, men, women and children cut to pieces, and their naked bodies left lying in the streets to be worried by famished dogs; and it is said the Court gaily visited the principal places of execution and enjoyed the sights very much indeed.

The strangest part of this horrible event is that the Pope at Rome issued a Bull thanking the French Court for its pious act in Butchering those Protestants for the greater glory of God, and the political benefit of his Holy Roman Catholic Church; this was the end of the Huguenot Church as a political party; they were finally given religious liberty in France under Henry IV., and became quiet, peaceful citizens.

England had the same trouble, some times there was a Catholic on the Throne, and some times a Protestant, ^{whichever} but ~~whichever~~ it was, they killed and burnt the members of the Church on the other side; when Mary was on the Throne, she tortured and burnt the Protestants, and when Elizabeth mounted the throne, she burnt the Catholics, and the poor devils as a rule did not understand anything about religion, some fanatical priest or minister filled their minds with bigotted nonsense, and the poor fools spouted it aloud without knowing the real meaning of it at all, but were mercilessly burnt and tortured nevertheless, and some people classed these ignorant bigots as martyrs.

There were other wars that were half- political and half religious, such as the conflict between Spain and Holland; Spain for years tried to conquer and subdue Holland; one of Spains best soldiers and diplomats, the Duke of Alva, aided by a fine army of Spain's matchless infantry, made every effort to capture, and annex the lowlands to the Spanish Empire, but the Dutch were a strong, brave, sturdy race of men, and by iron will and desperate courage, they maintained their freedom against all the efforts of mighty Spain; Philip II- King of Spain, was a biggoted Catholic, and his persistent efforts against Holland were caused as much by his hatred of the Protestant religion, as was his desire to extend his Empire by conquest; fortunately for Europe, Philip did not succeed; Holland maintained its independence, and religious war and hatred received a severe and very necessary check.

A similar conflict was the one in England, that between Charles the First and the Parliament; Charles was High Church, or on the side of the priests and ministers, and aided, and abetted by them, while the Parliament side of the conflict was upheld by the Puritans or Low Church people; history gives the reasons for this civil war, as political and financial, but in reading of the war itself, it is to be noted that religion plays a large part- especially in the battles, where the canting hypocrits are continually appealing to God for his kind assistance in enabling each side to give the other forces a good sound beating; this conflict ended in a victory for the Puritans or Low Church; and to make victory secure, they religiously cut off the head of Charles, the High Church King; this story is almost a page out of the Old Testament.

The wars of the German Empire against Saxony and Gustavus Adolphus was on the same scale and purpose, the German Empire wanted to annex more territory, and at the same time force the Catholic religion upon its inhabitants, all of this caused the ferocious campaigns of Gustavus Adolphus, Tilly, and Wallenstein, campaigns which made Central Europe a desert, and in the end were not of the slightest benefit to any country engaged, and were a horror and a torture to all people living in the countries where these terrible invasions took place.

France does not appear to have engaged in any religious war with any other nation; its only religious war was civil; we do not know if this was the result of good sense, and good politics on the part of the French ruling classes, or that there was not another religion near by which they hated with sufficient ferocity to cause them to attack.

The religious war of Spain was the attack by Spain on the Moorish followers of Allah, this was also religious and political; Ferdinand and Isabella wanted the Moors' land and cities, and the Priests wanted their money, their souls and their churches; unfortunately for humanity the Moors lost, and it ~~was~~ is to be pitied, for they were far better people than the Spaniards, more civilized, more artistic, more cultured, and the Moorish government in Spain would have been a far superior government for the people than the bigoted, benighted, ignorant government of Spain.

At one period of European history the land was devastated the whole part of that portion of the world was in strife, and none of them were religious wars that was the period of Napoleon's wars which were all political or patriotic; the first of these wars ~~was~~ those be-between Austria and France, were Patriotic; the French Revolutionists were fighting for existence, and to spread the democratic idea throughout Europe, and Napoleon's first campaigns were fought for the same high ideal, and those were as a rule very successful campaigns, but as Napoleon mounted higher, and higher in power and success, he cast aside those high ideals, and permitted ambition to rule his mind, and ambition caused his three major mistakes, and eventually cost him his throne; those mistakes were his attempt to conquer ^{Spain}, and to place his brother upon the throne of that country, and his ambitious attempt to invade Russia for which there does not seem to be a good sound reason, and his Concordat with the Pope, and that one was the most foolish mistake of all, for with it he bartered a-way the religious liberty of Europe in order to gain the support of Rome and the Catholics; Had Napoleon ignored the Pope, taken away his temporal authority, and left him merely the head of a religious body without any power whatever, religious liberty would have spread all over the world, and all religious wars would have ceased, a compact between church and state is always a mistake, for liberty must always surrender something when it compromises with a powerful religious body.

This same mistake was made lately by a European government, and for the same foolish reason, it is too soon to perceive that this was a vital error for the time is too short to note the ill effects of this mistake, but time will show the short sightedness of this very unwise move, for never did the heads of the Catholic Church sign a concordat or treaty, but that in the future they took full advantage of it, for the benefit of the Church, and never for the benefit of the country as a whole, or its inhabitants.

Europe has given more to the world than any other portion of the globe, practically all of the benefits to man in science, art and human knowledge have originated in Europe, ancient and modern; of all countries Greece was the leader and teacher in all we know of Science and beauty; Pythagoras and Thales gave us the rudiments of astronomy and mathematics, Archimedes, physics and hydraulics, Euclid laid down the rules of geometry, Socrates and Aristotle the rules of reasoning, and Plato the forms of good government; in architecture, the Greeks were the leaders, and in art, they led the world; they gave us the Tuscan, Doric, Ionic, Corinthian and Composite Columns, all are used throughout the world in building, and while the Composite is Roman, it was really copied from the Greeks; the architecture and beauty of the Parthenon at Athens has never been equaled, while Greek statuary has been for all time the world's standard of excellence; Greek writers, also pointed the way in drama, tragedy, and comedy, and the Greek poets and writers have handed down to us classics that have never been surpassed, so it is easy to perceive what a debt of gratitude even modern civilization owes to ancient Greece.

Ancient Rome spread civilization throughout the world, the Romans were the leaders in teaching the people of all countries how to govern; they were the first to establish a Republican form of government and the first to make the citizen paramount, the citizen was a real part of the state; all of the countries conquered by Rome received the benefit of Roman Rule, they were taught ideal self-government, building good roads, building bridges, and the necessity for a plentiful supply of good water; both the Roman Republic, and the Empire spread these beneficent, and enlightening influences throughout the known world, and but for the very unfortunate death of one great Roman, European civilization may have been advanced a thousand years or more.

After the fall of the Roman Empire, Italy contributed practically nothing to civilization, or mankind; some art and science was revived in the fifteen and sixteenth centuries, and especially in the art of painting, the Italians were leaders, but in the main, Rome was to all intents and purposes the cause of the dark ages in Europe.

The Moors of Spain were good astronomers, builders and artisans, they built the first public hospitals, and were pioneers in the study of medicine and surgery, the rule of the Moors on the whole, ^{was} a benefit to the country and its inhabitants.

England has been a world benefactor, and all races have been improved by England's contributions of good government, ~~and~~ manufacturing and commerce; the English are fine navigators, and they brought knowledge and modern comforts to all isolated parts of the globe; as governors of all parts of the earth, they have proved themselves to be wise and humane, and their rule has been beneficent everywhere; in modern times England points the way to the best National Government, and it is today the best governed country in the world, and English law is the finest example known of equal, and exact justice.

France has given to the world art, and the art of living; art in all of its combined beauty, painting, poetry, architecture, letters, and exquisite manufacturers, but above all they have shown us the real art of living, of enjoying life openly, of making the most of one's opportunities to add to the happiness and gaiety of all; this frame of mind is due to the sound logic and sense of the French people, who by the sheer force of logic seemed to know the proper thing to do under any and all circumstances.

Some part of Europe have contributed very little good to the general welfare; countries like Austria, Russia, the Eastern countries and some of them in the North part have not cut much of a figure in contributing to the world's happiness and amusement, yet this does not mean to imply that they were not good citizens, and good neighbors; and that they did their best in supplying the world with necessities, and comforts is well understood, so we can applaud all of them for trying to do their best endeavors to add to the benefit of all.

The one country in Europe that has done the most boasting about what it has done for humanity, and accomplished the less, and that has done the most vociferous denying of evil accomplished, and done the most evil is Germany, the fire-brand and universal trouble-maker that has been the direct cause of most of the evil in Europe during the past three hundred years; it was once truthfully said that Prussia was hatched out of a cannon ball; there is a world of truth in that saying, and there is not a particle of doubt that Prussia has been a terrible burden for the balance of the German people to carry.

The Prussians have one big blustering hero whom they worship Frederick the Great, the man who boasted that he never took a bath in his life; it can well be believed that this statement of his is true, not only that he was personally filthy, and never bathed his body, but also that he never took a mental or moral bath, for his moral filth was as pronounced as his bodily dirt; this man was a model German ruler and statesman; a man without a spark of honor or truthfulness in his mind; a man who stooped to all foul infamy and deceit to accomplish his ends; this man taught all future diplomats and officials of the German Nation the fine art of lying, deceit and depraved duplicity, so that today in the German mind, all other people are liars, and on the contrary, all Germans are white-winged saints, and it is against nature itself for any person to doubt any German's word on any subject under the sun.

This mental attitude is one with the German alone, and the reason for that is this has been hammered into the German for years, in home, school, church and army, it has been pounded into their heads so long, and so often that repetition has finally convinced them that it is a fact, so ~~many~~ today we have a nation of people who actually believe 146 that all other people are dumb-heads and liars, and that they themselves are the only one intelligent, and truthful people on earth.

This has been the mental history of the late German Empire, born in a deceitful line, and died in a whirlwind of mental dishonesty;
the Germans were never inventors, only imitators, they could not invent even good manners, for they have not got any even now; they could not ^{invent} anything as they have not the capacity, but they can and do imitate like the monkey; what they call their invention is only pains-taking industry, and application, for they certainly are a hard working people; the great trouble with the German is, he must be bossed, and a good stiff kick in the seat of his pants is all he can understand of discipline; every German must boss some one, the Emperor could kick his generals, the generals the Captains, and so on down the line to the post-master, and the preachers, and when a man fell so low that he did not have a man under-him who he could kick, why he went home and kicked his wife.

The German army leaders deliberately started the World War, they had been planning it for years, and found it necessary to start the deluge in 1914, for the reason that the country appeared to be going socialistic, and the army leaders feared that if that party controlled the government, it would curtail the army, which could not then force a war, for a smaller army might be defeated, so they forced the war on Europe while they were at the pinnacle of their might and strength; history tells the story how and outraged humanity finally smashed the German Army, the Emperor abdicated, and at last a Republican form of government was established; now here was the opportunity for the German people to prove their boasted superiority over other people, here was the time and place to prove to the world their mental capacity for good self-government, but in the last analysis they failed miserably.

Since 1919, there has been no good stable government in Germany, every form they have tried, has been a failure, and they have made a change lately that is the worst botch of all; they have placed at the head of the state, a bellowing, blustering, dictator with the appearance and manners of a Prussian drill sergeant, yet he is typically German, and that is what they understand and need, an all-highest, he can bellow and bark at them, and generally kick them around.

This dictatorial clown has already made a mess of things; right at the beginning of his power, he poked his nose into religious matters

the height of folly, and now has the clergy raging, and in no time at all ~~x~~ there will be fierce religious contention all over Germany; to make matters worse, he has lately signed a Concordat with the Pope, the same old blunder made by other Dictators who usually make this error thinking that this move will strengthen them politically, while as a matter of fact, the Pope has nothing to give any political power, and in the long run, it will be found out that these Concordats are by and for the benefit of the Catholic Church only.

The German Dictator is not the only one who has made this mistake, and in all cases it has been a sure sign of weakness, and lack of self-confidence that has led Dictators to commit this supreme piece of political folly; It would not surprise thinking men, if the Germans finally decide to recall the old ruling family back to the throne, it would be in line with their imbecility in politics, for in that case it would only be a question of time until all of its old race hatreds and jealousies were revived, and the peace of Europe would again be in constant danger of ~~being~~ violated; should that misfortune come to pass, and Europe was again in danger, it would be the duty of armed Europe to crush Prussia, sweep the country clean from end to end, and make it a wilderness; some people think the loss of Prussia would be a severe blow to civilization, but as a matter of fact the total annihilation of Prussia would be a blessing to all humanity.

In Russia during the past sixty years there has been a contention that has occupied thousands of columns in the Press of the world, and has been a subject for discussion all over the earth, and that is the Russian attack upon the Jews; these are called in the Public Press, POGRAMS, they are outbreaks against the Jews that have resulted in outrage, arson, pillage and murder; a vast number of people seem to think these outbreaks are caused by religious hatred, but that is not the truth of the matter, they are entirely racial; the Russians have never had a hatred for the Jewish religion, but in coming into contact with the Jews like other peoples they have developed a hard personal hatred of the Jews, for the Jews will not mix with any other race, and as a result this racial hatred becomes implanted in the minds of the ~~people~~ people.

A highly educated Russian explained it this way; the Russians as a rule were very ignorant, while on the contrary, the Jews are smart, the Russian has business with the Jew who outsmarts him, gets him to sign papers he does not understand, and in time, finds out he has been tricked and cheated, that he has probably signed a note or mortgage without knowing it, and suddenly finds he has been cheated and defrauded by trickery; when numerous cases of this kind come to be known, the anger and hatred become wide-spread, and it then does not take much effort to start bloody, personal reprisal.

That is most probably the real cause of the persecution of the Jews in Russia, as it has been in most countries where they have settled, but there is always the whine of the apologist that the poor innocent Jews are being persecuted by others on account of their dear, sweet religion.

As Europe gets older and wiser, it draws farther and farther away from religion; men are thinking more deeply, and more calmly, they do not take every cleric's word as the law of God; they have begun to discover that they know just as much, and perhaps more, about the meaning of life than the clerics do, and when men really learn to think, that is the beginning of the end of superstition and revealed religions.
