My dear Dr. Reyes:

I am interested in studying thinkers and movements of Mexico, and therefore am writing you for any help you may care to give me, which would be greatly appreciated.

Last week in Boston (twenty-five miles from my home town), Massachusetts, I heard and met Dr. Edmundo O'Gorman, and talked with him regarding Mexico. He suggested that I write you directly if I am interested in knowing about the Colegio de Mexico and its purposes.

So I would be pleased to learn from you the main purposes of the Colegio de Mexico, of which I understand you are President.

From my past reading and conversation, however, I believe the Colegio de Mexico was originally the "Caso de Espana." Is this correct? If so, in what year did the latter become the Colegio de Mexico? Also, as I have already stated above, I would like to know its main functions and purposes.

Any information you might care to give me will be greatly appreciated.

My reasons for the information: (1) My personal interest; and (2) possible inclusion of information about the Colegio in an article I may eventually have printed. Therefore I naturally desire to have the facts, and thus I am writing you.

Sincerely yours,

John H. Hershey
